

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for sharing information in a network includes steps of enabling a user to define a data segment, recording the defined data segment, transmitting first information associated with the defined data segment to a remote location, and receiving second information associated with the defined data segment from the remote location. An apparatus for performing the foregoing steps is also provided.